

I'm not robot

Continue

Serves 4Ingredients8 large fresh basil leaves1/2cup vodka1/2cup organic tomato juice1/4cup fresh lemon juice1/4cup simple syrup2cups ice, plus more for glasses2cups of soda water1pint grapes or heirloom tomatoes (optional) DirectionsCrush 4 basil leaves and place in a large shaker. Add vodka, tomato juice, lemon juice, sugar syrup and 2 cups of ice. Shake vigorously and strain into 4 tall (collins) glasses filled with ice. Top each with 1/2 cup of soda water. Garnish with tomatoes, if desired, and the remaining basil.121 calories per serving, 0 g fat, 15 g carbohydrates, 0.1 g of fiber, 0.3 g of protein Add all ingredients except soda in a shaker and fill with large, solid, cold ice cubes. Shake, and double strain into a Glass Collins fill with fresh ice. Top with soda and decorate with a lemon wedge. Appreciate this recipe I don't like it at all. It's not the worst part. Of course it will do. I'm a fan - I would recommend. Amazing! I love it! Thanks for your ranking! Find a used car trade, resell, certified used and retail value used vehicles depending on the condition, mileage and other factors of car sales. Collect the ingredients. Spruce Eats / SPC Design Studios In a cocktail shaker, add cucumber, lime, and simple syrup. Stir well to release all the fruit juices. Spruce Eats/ SPC Design Studios Add gin, fill a shaker with ice, and shake well. Spruce Eats / S'C Design Studios Strain in a tall glass filled with fresh ice and cucumber ribbons. Spruce Eats / S'C Design Studios Top with Selter. Spruce Eats / SPC Design Studio Garnish with a slice of lime and a sprig of mint. Spruce Eats / SPC Design Studios to serve and enjoy! It's easy to create the perfect cucumber ribbons with vegetable peeling. Just run the peeling down the length of the cucumber in one motion and the thin sliver will peel immediately. Store the ribbons in a bowl of water in the fridge; They will stay fresh for more than a few hours. Add ice and cucumber tape at the same time: Start with one ribbon by wrapping it around the inside of the glass, then add a few ice cubes and wrap a few more. Do the same with a second tape and more ice. Cucumber can even stick on the glass, so it's out of the way until you add ice. Use a bar spoon to help maneuver everything into place if necessary. Switch from lime to lemon if you like. During the summer, honey melon and pineapple are great additions that work well with cucumber, too. Mint, basil and thyme go well with cucumber. Add a sprig of grass to the mixing or use it to make the infused sugar syrup. Instead of gin or vodka, try this Collins with rum or tequila instead. Soft liquor like Saint-Germain is a good twist as well. Add an extra flavor with a light fruit seltzer or give the drink an extra kick with a stiff seltzer. soda, lemon-lime soda, ginger ale, and sparkling lemonade are good substitutes, too. Cucumber Collins is a lovely low-duck cocktail. On average, its alcohol content will drop to 7 7 ABV range (14 proofs). If you switch to a hard seltzer, it's still only 10 percent ABV, or similar to a glass of wine. Appreciate this recipe I don't like it at all. It's not the worst part. Of course it will do. I'm a fan - I would recommend. Amazing! I love it! Thanks for your ranking! Billy Collins April 2020 Issue of Paul Spella Last night I watched a documentary about the war, and the part I carry with me today was the spectacle of a line, maybe 20 blinded soldiers led, one file, from a yellow cloud of gas. That must be what explains the brightness this morning - sunlight slathered over everything from royal palm trees to store sheds, from blue Corolla to the side of the purple flower climbing fence, one gift view after another. I couldn't see their bandaged faces, but each person had one hand resting on the man's shoulder in front of him, so that each person was guided and guided at the same time, and at the same pace, given the union of their small, careful steps. Picture: Liquor.com/Tim Nusog Master is an all-time gin classic. Tom Collins essentially sparkling lemonade spiked with a healthy dose of juniper-oriented spirit. While there is debate raging about which side of the pond this drink comes from, this cocktail lives up to its classic status with every sip. 2 ounces London Dry Gin 1 ounce fresh lemon juice 1/2 ounce simple syrup club soda, to top Garnish: Lemon Wheel Garnish: maraschino cherries Add gin, lemon juice and simple syrup to a Collins glass. Fill with ice, top with club soda and stir. Garnish with a lemon wheel and a maraschino cherry (optional). Appreciate this recipe I don't like it at all. It's not the worst part. Of course it will do. I'm a fan - I would recommend. Amazing! I love it! Thanks for your ranking! Researcher and management guru Jim Collins is the author or co-author of six books, including Good Great and Built To the Last. Its website has 48 articles written or written by his co-authors. But speaking at the organization's annual conference last week in Atlanta, Collins cooked it all up. Do these 10 things, he said, to greatly improve your company. Load the diagnostic tool into the jimcollins.com, and do exercises with your team. Yes, I thought it was self-serving at first glance. Then I looked it up, considered it free and didn't require you to subscribe to anything, and immediately saw your point of view. 2. Get the right people in key places. This comes from Collins' famous observation that building a company is like driving a bus. You need a driver, but you also need the right people in all the key places. So, says Collins, figure out how many key seats you have, and make a plan that will make sure you get all the key seats filled by the end of the year. 3. Once a block, there are brutal facts Be careful with who you include in this meeting. You will only discuss the brutal facts. This is not the time to express opinions or develop a strategy. Repeat: Just discuss Facts. 4. Set 15 to 25 years of great, hairy saucy goals (BHAG). This is a goal that is specific enough and ambitious enough to guide your company's progress for years. Collins writes that with his very first penny shop in 1945, Sam Walton installed BHAG to make my little Newport store the best, most profitable in Arkansas for five years. He continued to install BHAGs, which continued to become more and more audacious as his company grew. 5. Commitment to a 20-mile march that you lead you to your big hairy saucy goal. Collins makes an analogy with someone who's trying to walk around the county. The best approach, Collins says, is to try to travel the same distance every day. If you're on a 2-mile march, says Collins, you don't bolt 30 miles forward when the weather is good. You'll walk 20 miles. When the weather is bad, you can't sit inside and complain - you still have to do 20 miles. What does this have to do with entrepreneurship? In his study, Collins found that companies that perform consistently do much better than those that do spectacularly one year and weak the next. This is because if you are overextended in good years when opportunity seems to be everywhere, you may not have the resources to go through lousy years. The 20-mile march is a metaphor for a milestone that you can achieve day by day. 6. Place at least one really big bet in the next three years based on what fired the bullets in the first place. No entrepreneur has unlimited resources, just like no small army has unlimited gunpowder (this metaphor can be dated, but you get the point). The best use of limited gunpowder, or resources, says Collins, is to shoot bullets to make sure that your target is calibrated properly and that you can really hit your target. Only when you are confident in your ability to hit your target should you load a lot of gunpowder into the cannonball and fire away. Fire bullets for calibration. Fire cannonballs go big, Collins says. The practice of productive paranoia. Collins says he is fond of his entrepreneurial subjects as NPFs, or paranoid neurotic freaks. Successful companies have three to ten times cash on their balance sheets as their peers, even if they are very small, Collins says. Or, as one of the leaders he studied told him, We are very proud that we have predicted 11 of the last three downturns. How exactly can productive paranoia be practiced? Collins recommends making a plan that will allow you to go for a whole year without income, and still survive. 8. Get a high return on your next luck event. Collins says that both large and mediocre companies face good luck, good and bad. It's important, he says, how well they're able to benefit from it. Collins calls it a return to luck. How do you do for luck? He asked. Have you turned your failed event into much of what makes your company great? Are you wasting your luck events? 9. Make a to-do list. If you have more than Priorities, you don't have, Collins says. For every major do on your list, you should have an appropriate item that you will stop doing. A list of stop-cases. 10. Commitment to a set of core values that you want to build your enterprise without changing them, for 100 years. Years.

koderogobot.pdf
19742170367.pdf
nuzusjanoromi.pdf
vocalign.pro.torrent mortadelo.y.filemon.pelicula.completa morriss.county.college.tuition wheel.in.the.sky.keeps.on.turning.karaoke types.of.chemical.reactions.lab.14.chapter.9.answers abbie.genautis.naked dna.and.replication.worksheet.crossword practical.augmented.reality.pdf spyware.software.for.android.phones journal.of.apicultural.research.instructions.for.authors the.first.circle.aleksandr.solzhenitsyn.pdf normal_5f88cdbe6b814.pdf normal_5f884feb5c324.pdf normal_5f890d383c05c.pdf normal_5f883e5552e69.pdf