Best penny stocks august 2020 robinhood

Who loves free stuff? Me and everyone I know! You're in luck today because here is your chance to get a free stock. Robinhood, an online brokerage, is giving away one stock when you sign up for a new account. Once you have an account, you can refer friends and you'll receive another free stock when they sign up. I opened a new account in 2017 and I received a share of Zynga. That was just $3.38, but it's still nice to get something for free. The stock is chosen randomly from Robinhood's settled shares, so you could get Apple, Ford, Sprint, or something else altogether. (You need to have a Social Security Number to open an account with Robinhood.) So what's the downside? Let's look into it more.*Originally written in 2017. Updated in 2021. My Zynga stock went up to $10.11. Wow! It did quite well over the past few years.Mrs. RB40 got a share of HP when she used my link. Nice! You can get your free share of stock right here. Who is Robinhood?Robin Hood lived in Sherwood Forest and he was one of my favorite childhood folklore figures. In 2017, I got a book from the library and read it to RB40Jr, but he just wasn't interested. Kids these days have a lot more entertainment options and I must admit Star Wars space ships are more exciting than Robin Hood running around a forest. OK, I digress. Robinhood is a brokerage that charges no commission when you trade US-listed stocks and ETFs. They came a long way since 2017 and they are quite well known now. Back then, you can only use a smartphone to trade, but now you can also trade from a computer. The nice thing about Robinhood is that you can buy fractional shares. For example, you can buy $20 worth of Google stock. It's nice for new investors who don't have a lot of money yet.Now, you can also invest in crypto. I just purchased $20 worth of Ethereum, my first crypto investment! This is completely speculative, but why not. I already spent too much time on the sideline. There is one issue with Robinhood. You can only buy and sell in US dollars. Also, you can't use it to buy anything or get the cryptocurrency out. For that, you need a crypto wallet account.Free trades?Free stock trading is great, but I am very skeptical. Every company that offers free trading in the past went out of business after a while or changed their model. How can they offer free trading? Well, here is how they make money. Robinhood makes money by charging a monthly fee on their Robinhood Gold account and taking rebates from the trading venues. You can read more about it on their site here – How Robinhood Makes Money.With Robinhood Gold you can invest up to 2x your buying power and gain access to after-hours trading. This is basically a margin account. You borrow money to invest. I don't like margin trading because it is risky. You can read more about the Robinhood Gold account here. Personally, I'll stick with the regular account and trade for free.Also, they don't pay interest on your cash balance. That's another way they generate income.Robinhood is best for...Robinhood is a great fit for new investors, especially if they're young and don't have a lot of money to invest. With Robinhood, you can buy a few shares of stocks and don't have to worry about the transaction fees. You don't need $5,000 to start investing. Anyone can start with $20. Investing can be intimidating so I think it's great that anyone can start with so little money. The earlier you start investing, the better off you'll be. You'll make some mistakes and learn along the way.Also, young investors are very comfortable with their smartphone. It's safe to trade stocks and conduct banking transactions on your phone these days. Life is so much more convenient than when I learned how to invest. In those days, I had to call a broker to buy shares. Technology is fantastic.New account bonusHere is what you have to do to get a free share.Sign up for a new account at RobinhoodVerify your email addressInstall the Robinhood app on your phoneClaim your free share. You can do this in the Robinhood app.Link your bank account to fund your accountShare your referral link with friends to get more shares!I signed up and received my free share in less than 10 minutes so you shouldn't have any problem with it. The share will take a couple of days to settle so you need to wait a bit before you sell. Also, you need to keep the cash in your account for 30 days.My account'I'm not moving my dividend account at Vanguard to Robinhood. I can trade free there as well. Over the last few years, many brokerages transitioned to a no-fee trading policy. Robinhood is one of the drivers for this transition. I love it. This is a huge improvement from those phone trading days. I think we used to pay over $100 per trade. The price to learn about investing was much higher in the 90s.Get your free stockWhat are you waiting for? Sign up with Robinhood and get your free stock today! I'll receive a free stock too when you sign up. Heh heh, that's why it's great to have a blog. I have an online platform where I can spread this kind of news and we both benefit. Here is my tutorial on how to start a blog and why you should. Everyone should have a blog to help track their personal goals. It's been extremely useful for me and blogging might change your life too.I'm sure you're curious what kind of stock you can get so I'll share my Robinhood portfolio below. These are all the stocks I received from referring new users.SIRIFZNGASPPWRGECCLFTMUSADTGLUUHLASXCPortfolio value: $696Do you have a Robinhood account? If not, you should sign up to get a free share? Let us know what you got.Sign up with Robinhood Sign up to receive new articles via email We hate spam just as much as you To be 100% sure, there is nothing good about this novel coronavirus pandemic. We've lost far too many people in the U.S. and throughout the world. Worse yet, health experts forecast that more innocent lives will be taken. Nevertheless, the shifting of our priorities and perspectives have enabled positive change. One of those is how we view personal investing. And this is perhaps no better exemplified than through so-called Robinhood stocks. As I'm sure you've heard, Robinhood is an absolute phenomenon, a trading app that finally taught millennials and younger people the importance of putting money to work for you for the long haul. Before the pandemic upended everything, financial analysts had trouble convincing the young to invest and invest early. Now, some of that can't be put squarely on the shoulders of millennials. After all, this demographic is burdened with student loan debt. As well, many in this age bracket have grown up watching their parents and relatives suffer tremendously through multiple crises and recessions. According to the Washington Post, a severe economic downturn in one's teenage years can permanently alter behavior. But in this case, the pandemic may have ended up fighting fire with fire. One of the most talked about of talking points was the dramatic rise of Robinhood stocks. Suddenly, the demo that eschewed investing for enjoying experiences today have become rabid consumers of publicly traded securities. Of course, this dynamic isn't without its criticisms. As many experts have pointed out, the trading app utilizes a "gamified" interface. With playful graphics and sounds accompanying each conducted trade, many fear that the platform is creating addictions rather than a true appreciation of money management. Still, the magnitude of popularity for these Robinhood stocks to buy seem to refute that claim. Coca-Cola (NYSE:KO) Microsoft (NASDAQ:MSFT) Facebook (NASDAQ:FB) Amazon (NASDAQ:AMZN) Alibaba (NYSE:BABA) Sony (NYSE:SNE) PayPal (NASDAQ:PYPL) Peloton (NASDAQ:PTON) Plug Power (NASDAQ:PLUG) Moderna (NASDAQ:MRNA) Frankly, when you look at the above list, it's alarming how normal it looks. No, I'm not talking about new normal normal, but how we used that term before this crisis. Honestly, many of these Robinhood stocks would belong on most investors' portfolios, irrespective of their risk profile. If you can say one thing, money talks and millennials are putting their green on reasonable, high-probability investments. Therefore, you can take lessons from this crowd and consider these Robinhood stocks for your own long-term strategy. Coca-Cola (KO) Source: Fotazydmak / Shutterstock.com So that you can follow my logic, I'll be breaking down the following Robinhood stocks to buy into three segments: safe/boring, technology/innovation, and speculative. Of course, you will see much overlap in these companies. However, there's no such bleed through with Coca-Cola. More than likely, you're not going to find anyone that would suggest KO stock is an exciting name. Apparently, though, millennials will disagree. Coca-Cola is one of the most popular Robinhood stocks, featuring an "81% buy" rating on the trading app's Top 100 list. Frankly, the inclusion of KO stock on this revered – I guess you can call it that now, right? – list contradicts the many arguments that young Americans are whimsical space cadets. Obviously, I can't know for sure what most millennial traders are thinking here. Nevertheless, I can say that Coca-Cola is a smart idea, especially if we're heading into a prolonged recession. Mainly, this is because the new normal disincentivizes high-contact beverage retailers while incentivizing standard grocery fare, which suits the soft drink icon perfectly. Microsoft (MSFT) Source: NYCStock / Shutterstock.com Ordinarily, Microsoft belongs with the crowd of technology-based companies. But in the specific context of Robinhood stocks, the fact that MSFT stock ranks so highly (a 90% buy at time of writing) confirms that young investors aren't always about chasing the flashy flavor of the week. Instead, with MSFT being so popular, it's evidence that millennials care about their financial future. One of the biggest reasons why non-Robinhood traders love MSFT stock is that it's levered to everything. From software applications to cloud computing to video games, if it's digital, it's likely that Microsoft has a solution. And if it doesn't, it may be cooking something up. But with the new normal, Microsoft is taking on more importance. Thanks to its proprietary business communication platform Microsoft Teams, the company was fortuitously prepared for the pandemic. As well, it's possible that over time, the tech firm can steal some market share from obvious plays on Covid-19. Facebook (FB) Source: Ink Drop / Shutterstock.com One of the surprising listings among the most popular Robinhood stocks was Facebook. No, I wasn't surprised that younger people bought up its shares. Rather, it's that FB stock is so darn trendy. At time of writing, Facebook enjoys an 84% buy rating, which is right up there with some compelling companies. Not only that, FB stock ranks highest among the big three in social media. Snap (NYSE:SNAP) is considerably lower at 64%, even though its platform resonates deeply with young adults. And then you have Twitter (NYSE:TWTR), President Trump's favorite social media outlet. I don't think there's any relation, but TWTR has a comparatively subterranean buy ranking at 22%. In my opinion, the takeaway here is that Facebook has long-term relevance. Sure, you can spout off with or against celebrities on Twitter. You can goof around and have fun on Snapchat. But only through Facebook can you do all these things while simultaneously using its network for productive or professional endeavors. You see, millennials are much more forward-thinking than critics give them credit. Amazon (AMZN) Source: Sundry Photography / Shutterstock.com For these next four popular Robinhood stocks to buy, I'm going to focus on the broader technology space. While you can fit so many names here, the trading app's users have spoken: Amazon is not only one of the most popular tech-related tickers on Robinhood, but it currently ranks inside the top five with a sky-high 94% buy. Again, this is an opportunity where we might need to rethink our assumptions about millennial investing behaviors. Though there's no denying that we saw some crazy trades this year – Hertz Global (NYSE:HTZ) anyone? – time and again, young adults are choosing publicly traded companies with solid fundamentals and credible pathways to growth. Honestly, you can't argue against AMZN stock for almost any investment strategy. Further, the popularity of Amazon may point to millennials really absorbing current events and applying them to their portfolio. For instance, e-commerce sales as a percentage of total retail revenues jumped to 16.1% in the second quarter of 2020 from 14.42% in Q1. That's a whopping 36.44% increase and a sequential quarter-to-quarter record since data was kept. Since the new normal may be an extended reality, AMZN stock is easily a long-term buy. Alibaba (BABA) Source: testing / Shutterstock.com Unless you're President Trump, China isn't the most popular subject right now in the U.S. However, for the Trump administration, going after the Chinese – while apparently profiting from them, if a damning New York Times article regarding a secret bank account is to be believed – is part of the master plan. But to millions of voters, this may appear like the arsonist is also the fire chief. If so, we could see Joe Biden take the White House. Theoretically, this should be the best outcome for Alibaba. That said, even if lightning strikes twice for Trump, you shouldn't ignore the draw of BABA stock. Currently, the Chinese e-commerce giant has a 96% buy rating. Only Virgin Galactic (NYSE:SPCE) and Catalyz Pharmaceuticals (NASDAQ:CPRX) are more popular, both tied at 100% buy. Perhaps one of the strongest reasons to consider BABA stock – and other Asia-related investments – is higher social trust in the region. According to the Chinese Journal of Sociology, long-term urban residents in China tend to be more trusting than their rural counterparts, which may have played a role in their containing of the novel coronavirus. Interestingly, social trust increased in South Korea regarding society and government agencies. I suspect a similar dynamic in other Asian countries, which makes BABA a clever contrarian buy among Robinhood stocks. Sony (SNE) Source: Sundry Photography / Shutterstock.com Many years ago, video games were considered child's play. Not anymore. Now, the sector has become a multi-billion-dollar industry, attracting players of all backgrounds. Therefore, I wasn't too terribly surprised when a survey by the Entertainment Software Association revealed that 38% of players were aged 18 to 34 years, while 26% fell under the ages 34 to 54 years bracket. The under 18 years crowd? They only represent 21% of gamers! Logically, then, we also shouldn't be taken aback when one of the most popular Robinhood stocks to buy has been Sony. At time of writing, SNE stock has a 92% buy rating, rounding out the top five. True, Japanese firms for years have suffered from severe bouts of irrelevance. Admittedly, Sony has not always provided much confidence to stakeholders. Nevertheless, what has always kept the lights on at the consumer technology firm and then some is its PlayStation video game console. With the latest PS5 scheduled for release this holiday season, interest has intensified for SNE stock. In addition, Sony has been a leading manufacturer of smartphone optics technology, making it a much more compelling opportunity than before. PayPal (PYPL) Source: JHVEPhoto / Shutterstock.com Another highly regarded play among tech-related Robinhood stocks is PayPal. A spinoff of online marketplace eBay (NASDAQ:EBAY), PYPL stock has enjoyed some significant rallies since its introduction as a separate tradable entity. Currently, shares have an 84% buy rating on the trading platform and outside fundamentals suggest PayPal could get even more popular. Primarily, the company has substantial exposure to addressing the unbanked and underbanked. According to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, a 2019 survey revealed that 5.4% of U.S. households (roughly 7.1 million households) were unbanked. With the economic calamity associated with the coronavirus pandemic, along with the number of the underbanked, that leaves a huge gulf of Americans without adequate access to the financial system. Addressing this crisis within a crisis is pivotal to bringing some measure of social equity in this country. Fortunately, PayPal can play an important role here, giving PYPL stock some credibility as an environmental, social and governance (ESG) play. Moreover, people and businesses are going cashless due to the global health emergency. That only makes PYPL more compelling, which explains its popularity among Robinhood traders. Peloton (PTON) Source: JHVEPhoto / Shutterstock.com For my final three ideas for Robinhood stocks to buy, I'm going to address the more speculative choices that have attracted millennials. First up is Peloton, the manufacturer of the exercise bike that drew much scorn before the Covid-19 pandemic upturned our world. If you'll recall, there was much buzz about Peloton's commercial, which featured a man gifting his fit, attractive wife the underlying exercise bike. In my opinion, I thought it was ridiculous in a goofy sort of way. However, many folks weren't having it, leading to some interesting back-and-forth on social media. Well, those were simpler times, to say the least. During the crisis, PTON stock has absolutely dominated the markets, gaining over 330% year-to-date. Unfortunately, Peloton suffered a PR bruising when it had to recall thousands of bikes due to injury reports. Obviously, this isn't a great look for PTON stock, so it's no shocker that shares have been volatile since the disclosure. Still, it appears Robinhood traders don't care because PTON still has an 88% buy rating. With Covid-19 cases rising sharply since early September, this might be a speculative bet worth considering. Plug Power (PLUG) Over the last several days, fuel-cell specialist Plug Power has printed red ink, worrying many investors that they're at risk of holding the bag. Despite this concern, PLUG remains one a favorite among Robinhood stocks, featuring an 89% buy rating. Coincidentally, it ranks just above Peloton. Based on what we're seeing in this election cycle, speculators have good reason to be bullish on PLUG stock. According to JoeBiden.com, if the former Vice President wins, his environmental plan "will set a target of reducing the carbon footprint of the U.S. building stock 50% by 2035." Better yet for PLUG stock, Biden doesn't necessarily need to keep that promise right away. Just by winning the election, Plug Power could soar to the moon on anticipation of a greener future for the company and the environment. Assuming that the polls aren't fake, the former VP does have a great shot of bringing it home. Moderna (MRNA) Source: Ascannio / Shutterstock.com Probably the riskiest among the well-known Robinhood stocks right now is Moderna. As you know, the company has been hard at work developing a vaccine for the coronavirus. Therefore, the company clearly has the support of the White House along with a hurting public that is desperate for a long-term solution. Regrettably, nothing is ever so simple with vaccines. Over the last several weeks, I've written extensively about the major vaccine contenders, including Moderna. Although MRNA stock is an intriguing play thanks to the underlying messenger RNA platform, nucleic-acid vaccines have never been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. Thus, if Moderna's candidate meets clinical muster, it would be a first. However, multiple vaccine candidates have encountered setbacks. As well, an antibody drug developed by Eli Lilly (NYSE:LLY) also suffered hiccups, resulting in a temporary pausing of its late-stage clinical trial. As far as I'm aware, Moderna's vaccine hasn't generated safety issues. Still, if a problem pops up, that could spell trouble for MRNA stock. From this vantage point, Moderna could fly higher because of extraordinary demand. However, you should also be aware of the severe downside risk. On the date of publication, Josh Enomoto held a long position in SNE. A former senior business analyst for Sony Electronics, Josh Enomoto has helped broker major contracts with Fortune Global 500 companies. Over the past several years, he has delivered unique, critical insights for the investment markets, as well as various other industries including legal, construction management, and healthcare.
